DIXIE BEE LINE TO BE THE SHORTEST ROUTE

Canvass of Northern Commissioners Indicates Probable Course of Great Highway--Route
to Run Through Henderson, Earlington,
Hopkinsville, Guthrie and Springfield, Tenn.
Following General Line of L. & N.

EARLINGTON, MORTONS GAP AND NORTONVILLE ENTERTAIN COMMITTEE

Flags were flying and banners waving and the business houses of the town suitably decorated Friday in honor of the Dixie Bee Line Committee, who came here from Dawson. Early in the day automobiles from this city, Mortons Gap and Nortonville began arriving filled with enthusiastic Bee Line boosters. By the time the first auto containing some of the committee arrived there were a large number of machines lined up waiting and the streets were full of people. Strung across main street were large banners with the words, "Earlington Welcomes The Bee Lovers." On arriving at Earlington the committee were joined by the waiting auto's and some fifty in number and made the inspection of the route between Earlington and Nortonville. At Mortons Gap, where the first stop was made, the welcome address was made by Mr. Cole, who made a brief but excellent talk. He was followed by Mayor Bosse. The party were served cigars by the Bee Line boosters at Mortons and then proceeded to Nortonville. All along the route from Mortons Gap to Nortonville the people were lined up along the road waving flags, handkerchiefs and pillow cases shouting "Bee Line or bust." At Nortonville the entire town acted as a reception committee and served sweet cider and cakes lavishly. Several short talks were made here and the committee returned to Earlington. On arriving at Earlington the committee was met by the local reception committee, the teachers and pupils of the schools and the majority of the citizens of Earlington. Mr. Jas. R. Rish acted as master of ceremonies, Mayor W. E. Hash being absent from the city. Mr. Rish, as usual, made a splendid address, introducing Mayor Ben Bosse, of Evansville. Mayor Bosse spoke under great difficulty, but managed to make himself heard above the clang of the engine bells and escaping steam. He was followed by E. E. Noble, of Princeton, Ind., and Mr. Cooper, of Hopkinsville, who made a few well chosen remarks advocating good roads as a splendid asset to any community. After the speaking the committee and their friends accompanied by some of the local people repaired to the park where barbecued meats and other refreshments were served in abundance.

The party then left for Slantern and Saree. Several of the committemen said they had not met with such enthusiasm anywhere on the route as they had at Earlington, Mortons Gap and Nortonville and they also hinted pretty broadly that these three towns would not be far from the Dixie Bee Line when it was completed. The decision will not be made until Nov. 4th, when the committee will meet in Evansville.

Shop Them Both

At Providence, Ky., Sunday, Ester Morton (col'sho) and killed Harvey McDowell, aged 30, and perhaps mortally wounded his wife, aged 26, when he caught them coming out of a disreputable house near the town Sunday. He had warned them that he would kill them if he caught them together again. Mrs. Morton, in spite of the warning, took her husband's car and met her lover.

EARLINGTON BOOSTERS CLUB MEETS

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Earlington Boosters Club was held at the City Hall Thursday night, Sept. 18. A good attendance was on hand. Further time was granted the Constitutions and By-Laws Committee to report. Many things for the good of Earlington were discussed, among them the I. C. proposition. On a vote of the body in regard to whether it is desirable to encourage the I. C. to come to Earlington, the expression was unanimous in favor. Another meeting will be held Saturday night, Sept. 25., at which time a constitution will be adopted and officers elected. A free discussion of those present favored joining the Dawson Club in any project looking to the extinction of the I. C. at this time. The Boosters mean business, and all expect to see a greater Earlington.

ONE HUNDRED BOYS

Object to Paying $15 For Their Free Appointment

A surprise was thrown into the registration proceedings at State University when about 100 students who were county appointees asserted their claim to exemption from paying the incidental fee of $15 charged to all matriculates.

It developed that the county appointees had organized and engaged Attorney Geo. C. Webb to represent them in the matter and they propose to carry it into court if necessary to maintain what they believe is a just claim. The county appointees have been advised that a decision was handed down by the Fayette circuit court in 1904 enjoining the university from collecting a similar fee from the county appointees, who protested against it. "THE MAIL ORDER BUG" (With Apologies to Jim Riley)

A little prosperity has come to our town to stay. The local merchants are all glad that trade has come this way. There was a time when money fled and bid out in a fog. Enclosed find check for which please send as per your catalogue; We had the same goods here at home, the prices too were right but somehow no one understood and no one saw the light.

The out-of-town concern had methods we did not know about—And the Mail Order House will get you if you don't mind out.

Once we had a merchant who wasn't very wise. He kept a general store but he wouldn't advertise. His groceries and his drygoods, his eggs and butter too.

His hardware and his tools and things were good but no one knew. And so folks spent their money where it didn't help a bit.

To make the town a better one and make us proud of it, The city had the improvements before we knew what we were about, And the Mail Order House will get you if you don't mind out.

One man at last woke up and advertised his goods. And all the others followed suit and came out of the Woods. And they helped their home town paper which alone does its share.

To boost the town and help to put it on the map somewhere, And the paper it helped them in turn and the people came to buy. And found that money spent at home makes old depression fly. And unless this mutual spirit kinder hover all about, The Mail Order House will get you if you don't mind out.

TO GIVE COLT SHOW AT MORTONS GAP

Hopkins County Live Stock Association Organized and Will Give Show.

The Hopkins County Live Stock Association, of Mortons Gap, will give a colt show at Mortons Gap, Saturday, Sept. 25, 1915. The association intends to make this an annual affair for the purpose of encouraging the farmers to raise more and better stock. They are offering some nice cash prizes and merchandise premiums on Hopkins County colts and will no doubt have a great many entered in the show. The Mortons Gap band boys are going to furnish the music for the occasion and the association intends to make it a great day. They are going to be prepared to take care of the crowd and not only give them a great colt show but entertain them in a fine manner. Everybody in the county is invited to come and bring their friends.

This speaks well for the community of Mortons Gap and shows that its citizenship is wide awake and desires to do all they can for the betterment of the farmer and county. It is the duty of every citizen to encourage this move and to help in making it a grand success. We have the people, stock and lands. All we need is for some one to take the lead in a progressive way to develop what we have and we can in a short while be as famous as the Blue Grass section. We take our hats off to the enterprising citizenship of Mortons Gap and wish them well and predict a great success.

Remember the date, Saturday, Sept. 25. Go, take your friends.

ROCKED THE HOLY ROLLERS

Dawson Springs, Ky., Sept. 18. A meeting of Holy Rollers that was being held here at the home of Rev. Jordan was broken up by unknown persons.

The marauders did not attempt to inflict vengeance upon the members of the sect, but contented themselves with stoning the house.

All the windows were broken and the participants in the meeting made hasty exit.

Rev. Jordan was once before visited by Possum' Hunt'ers who took him and his son and another man out and whipped them severely. They charged Jordan then, who had been preaching on the streets of Dawson, with talking too much.

BIG CIRCUS

Coming This Way Soon

The Barnum and Bailey Greatest Show on Earth will exhibit at Madisonville on Saturday, Oct. 9, and this good news is being heralded everywhere by the many agents of this, the biggest and foremost amusement institution of the world. The Barnum and Bailey Circus has always been the largest that travels and this season the management has found it necessary to add many more cars to their trains in order to provide for the great equipment. It requires 85 double length railroad cars to transport the big show, 1200 people are employed, there are 700 horses, 40 elephants and a menagerie of 110 cages, 480 world famous artists take part in the greatest circus program this world has ever known.

A fitting introduction to the wonderful performance this year, is the presentation of the new, spectacular pageant, "Lalla Rookh," in which nearly 1000 characters take part.

In the circus proper, which is presented in three rings, four stages, the hippodrome and in the dome of the dome of the largest tent ever erected, 480 performers from every nation in the world take part and present a vast array of foreign features entirely new to America. A wonderful trained animal exhibition is given by the Marvelous War Elephants, Fallenbergs Wonder Barn, Madam Bradna's Angel Horses, Thalero's Dogs, Ponies and Monkeys, and the Barnum and Bailey Statne Horses.

Great interest is already being shown in this neighborhood and great crowds will no doubt go to Madisonville Saturday, Oct. 9, for the biggest and most enjoyable holiday of the year. Everyone is advised to get an early start in order to be there in time for the parade which starts promptly at 10 A. M., and which is said to eclipse anything of its kind ever before attempted in the history of circus business.

A Medieval Tale

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Medieval times were prolific of stories of the devil, who was supposed to be going about making bargains for souls. A great many such tales illustrating his methods have been handed down to us from that age in which they were believed by those who circulated them. Here is one that has remained dormant for many years. It was told me by an American multi-millionaire who bought a castle in Germany and found the legend among papers that had not been disturbed for hundreds of years.

Count Caspar Ardenreid, the lord of the castle in question, was in love with Bertha, the daughter of a neighboring Baron Cronsheld. There had been a feud between the families, and Cronsheld refused the young count the hand of his daughter.

One evening the count was sitting in his cabinet, disconsolate that he must be deprived of his love, when the door opened and a man entered wearing a pointed beard and an upturned moustache.

"Who are you?" asked the count, "and how did you gain access to me unannounced?"

"I am the devil," was the response, "and I have come to help you to win the hand of the girl you love."

"Leave me; you will require a soul to pay for your assistance."

"You are right. I must have the soul of your firstborn child."

"Begone, I say; I will have nothing to do with you."

"Then you must give up all hope of union with the Countess Bertha. Her father will never yield."

The devil stuck to his work, conversing with the count and constantly getting him under his satanic influence. Caspar asked him how he would accomplish his object, and he said the baron was a skillful chess player. The devil would taunt him into playing a game, the winner to name a husband for his daughter. Caspar, who was desperately in love, finally consented, but only after wringing from the devil a certain condition. He might redeem his child's soul if he could beat the devil at a game of chess. This did not seem likely, but it was the only hope Satan would give.

The bargain having been struck, Satan sent the baron word that he had heard of his remarkable skill at chess and challenged him to a contest. The baron, much flattered, invited the challenger to his castle. Satan appeared in the person of an agreeable young man giving evidence by his rich attire and general lavishness of being a grand personage. He told the baron that he would play him a game of chess, the stake to be what he had named to Caspar. The baron, supposing that he wanted Bertha for himself, consented. Of course the devil beat the baron, and the winner named for a husband for his daughter Count Caspar Ardenreid.

The baron consented, cursing the trickster at the same time and wondering why he had befriended the lover. Since there was nothing against Count Caspar but the feud with which he had nothing to do, Baron Cronsheld made the best of it and soon became attached to his son-in-law. Caspar told him how he had won his consent and what he had agreed to pay for it. This excited the old man to spend a great deal of time studying difficult chess problems in order that when the devil came to claim his grandchild he might redeem him by beating the arch fiend at his own game. He was so proud of his ability as a chess player that he really aspired to beat the devil.

The day a man child was born to the count and countess was both happy and a sad one. The lady had learned from her husband the secret that her baby's soul must go to the devil, and since she was very religious the calamity was the more awful. Her father assured her that her son was safe, for it had been stipulated that if any one could be found to beat the devil at chess the bargain would be off. He (the baron) had learned a number of combinations any one of which was sure to win.

The mother proposed that the baby be baptized at once, hoping that this might forestall Satan, but before it could be done he appeared and claimed the child's soul. Since all depended on a chess contest the count proposed that three games be played between the baron and the devil, two games to win. So they sat down at once and began to play. Satan said he would play the first game with his eyes shut. He purposedly threw away the game, but even without seeing the chessmen he could have beaten his antagonist if he had been so disposed. The second game he beat the baron in less than a dozen moves.

Cronsheld refused to play the third game, declaring that the best chess player in the world could not beat one who played using superhuman means. The count went to his wife to impart the news that their son's soul depended on the third game, which the devil was sure to win. Bertha said she had been praying to the Virgin Mary for help and had been told what to do. When her husband went back to the devil he said he would play the third game himself. Satan laughed scornfully, but sat down at the board.

Half a dozen moves had been made and Satan had but two more to make to checkmate when Caspar threw back his doublet and displayed a gold cross. Satan cringed under the table and left the room like a dog with his tail between his legs.

"And he never came back for his pay."

LINCOLN'S GREATEST AMBITION WHEN HE WAS PRESIDENT

In the "Interesting People" department of the September American Magazine appears an article about Russell H. Conwell, the famous Philadelphia speaker who has delivered one lecture over five thousand times. In the course of the article Mr. Conwell tells as follows what Abraham Lincoln once said to him:

"No man ought to be ambitious to be President of the United States: when this war is over, and that won't be very long. I tell my Tad we will go back to the farm where I was happier as a boy when I dug potatoes at twenty-five cents per day than I am now. I tell him I will buy him a mule and a pony, and he shall have a little cart, and he shall make a little garden in a field of his own."

David and Goliath

By SARAH BAXTER

Had you never heard of the Gila monster? No? Well, the Gila looks something like a young alligator. When attacked it seems to be dead. Its bite is especially poisonous. The victim lives a long while in great agony, then

After the train had pulled out and Sir Charles had been locked in his compartment he began to feel drowsy and

There is—or rather there was—out the plains west of the Missouri river a human monster as much to be dreaded as the Gila. This was the desperado who made his prowling grounds in new Mexico. When America was being despised by a civilization people the Gila was the renegade white. He was with the Indians and fought with them against their enemies, including men of his own color. When the savages wished to draw the whites into their country they would use the renegade for the purpose, and he was not ashamed to serve them.

The human monster in another form was the terror of the plains when they were living from lawlessness to civilization. He delighted in cruelty. There was no law in the country on which he had operated himself to prevent the Indians from punishing him; therefore he used the revolver, and since that was his especial implement he was so armed with it that he had every advantage.

Uncle Rogers, an Indiana farmer, having a sickly wife, sold his farm and took her with their children to a cabin in the southwest, then being known as the white settlers. There he "settled" and called what grew up around him while his wife was regaining her strength. A hamlet grew up in the vicinity, consisting of four dry-goods stores, a blacksmith shop and a from Texas Bill came out of the saloon bringing a revolver about him as if celebrating the Fourth of July. Rogers, he put a bullet into his side, "near the region of the heart. He had nothing whatever against Rogers. He fired at him, but he would not a shot or any other mark.

One day Rogers was passing through the hamlet when a man

The victim fell and lay in the road. Some persons took him up and carried him home. There was little or no hope that he would survive, and at his death his invalid widow and her children would be in a destitute condition.

He lingered along, however, and one day his wife heard him muttering to himself that when he recovered the man who had shot him would have a chance to shoot him again or die.

This boded no good for the Rogers family. Texas Bill would have every advantage in a fight, and since it was to be expected that if Rogers recovered one of the two would die every one knew that Bill would be on the watch for his enemy in case he got out again. There were no courts to punish the crime or prevent a subsequent murder. If the husband and father did not die of his wound he would subsequently be killed.

It remained for a weak woman to solve the problem. As soon as she could be spared from attendance on her husband Mrs. Rogers took a bag and went out on the plain. When she returned it was evident that she had something in the bag, but what it was no one knew and no one cared.

She took it into the cellar and left it there, locking the door. Every day after that she would go into the cellar, take the bag and go down into the basement where she would spend some time answering questions as to her husband's condition, but it was noticed that she was always looking about her and had an eye especially on the window.

One morning while she was thus engaged Texas Bill came out of the saloon, smoking a long black cigar. His fingers were tucked in his boots, his shirt was open, exposing his hairy breast, and his face was flushed with liquor. A revolver was stuck to his belt. Mrs. Rogers left her friends and advanced toward him.

There was something about her movement to tell the others that she had some intent concerning her husband's safety. A certain resolute look in her eye, a quickness in her walk. She seemed like a David advancing to attack a Goliath. Was the bag she carried a sling containing a stone?

Texas Bill stood for a moment on the porch of the saloon looking out on the saloon scene, then staggered down the steps and walked away from the group of which Mrs. Rogers had formed a part. She followed him. While doing so she raised the skirt of her dress and about her waist uncoiled a rope. When she came to within a few yards of Bill she threw a noose in the rope over his shoulders and when it fell to his elbows gave it a sudden jerk, pinching his arms.

From this moment she moved with lightning-like rapidity, holding the lasso in her left hand, while with her right she turned the bag over on Bill's shoulders. A loathsome thing fastened itself to his back. Giving a mighty yell, he freed his arms and grasped what clung to him, but it was too late to save himself from its bite. Wrenching it off, he saw the deadly Gila. Fortunately for the woman he was entirely engaged with the monster to get any heed to her or he might have served her as he had served her husband. He went howling down the road, and his cries were heard till death relieved him of his agony.

Rogers recovered, and his wife was after known as the woman who had beaten Texas Bill.

PROTECTED HIMSELF.

The Doctor Made Sure at Least That He Would Not Be Bleed.

Sir Charles Locock, who was the physician attending Queen Victoria at a certain period of her reign, was once commanded by her majesty to proceed to Berlin and report on the condition of her daughter, the crown princess. On the return trip, stopping at Dover for a hasty luncheon, he was enmeshed to snatch a glass of poor sherry and a piece of questionable pork pie.

After the train had pulled out and Sir Charles had been locked in his compartment he began to feel drowsy and

Rockefeller Says He Will Not Lend Allies Money

Cleveland, Sept. 10.—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., has definitely, positively and firmly determined that he will take no part in lending money to carry on the conflict in Europe. In an interview obtained with the world's richest man by the United Press, it was learned yesterday that the oil king has been offered opportunities to enrich himself further by lending money to the warring nations, and that he has absolutely refused.

"Are you expecting a call from the commission of European bankers now in New York to negotiate a billion-dollar war loan for the allies?" Rockefeller was asked.

"No," he replied emphatically, "I certainly am not expecting a visit from the commission, nor do I expect them to ask me for the war loan. They know I would not consider it."

Both Were Refused

Then, after a pause: "Both England and Russia have asked me for loans; they were refused."

Again Rockefeller was meditatively silent a moment. Then he exclaimed fervently:

"This war is awful! Don't you think it is awful?"

Both Were Refused

"Morgan May Dethrone Him

In reference to the Wall street report that financing the war was enabling Morgan to take from Rockefeller the title of "the richest man in the world," this question was put to Rockefeller: "What effect will it have on conditions if Morgan negotiates this billion-dollar war loan for the allies?"

The shrewd smile of the sagacious business man played over Rockefeller's face.

Then, instead of answering directly, he recited this:

"A wise old owl lived in an oak,

The more he saw, the less he
